

ELLE April 2003

“The DiamondSkin microdermabrasion system is a major breakthrough in the field of skincare. Instead of using aluminum-oxide crystals, it uses a “diamond-chip encrusted handpiece”. Dr. Joshua Martin says that he has used the DiamondSkin machine on many top celebrities in Hollywood and Beverly Hills. “The DiamondSkin is the future of microdermabrasion machines, I can’t see how anyone can use an Aluminum-Oxide machine on their own patient anymore”, says Dr. Martin.

VOGUE September 2002

Mary Wilkens, the CEO of Waldorf Day Spa, is a real fan of microdermabrasion. However, like all women, she prefers diamonds. With DiamondSkin microdermabrasion, she can get the best of both worlds.

COSMOPOLITAN January 2002

Until recently, microdermabrasion, the skin-resurfacing treatment, meant bombarding your face with tiny crystals through a tube. Kind of like a mini-sandblaster on your face. Doesn't sound like something you would want to do, right? Well, with the newly developed DiamondSkin system, you can forget about the old way of doing microdermabrasion.

SPAFINDER October 2001

“A great new piece of equipment to add to your office is the new DiamondSkin machine. It has the potential to increase the profit in your practice substantially. Many experts in the industry think that crystal-free microdermabrasion is the future. Aluminum-Oxide may cause many potential health problems in both clients and practitioners. “
